Toast, Don’t Coast

At Brethren Christian, we continue to celebrate the rich legacy handed down to us from the faithful generations of parents, students and staff that came before us. We toast the past but are not coasting into the future. As in our past, the good things that are happening at the school now are often accomplished by our community of parents, students and staff...

PARENTS...

- renovated the Biology Lab enabling us to add Advanced Placement AP® Biology this year.
- upgraded our classrooms which now have state of the art projectors, sound systems and document cameras.
- are currently donating ultra-high quality, professional sound and lighting equipment for Chapel and our outstanding Fine Arts performances.
- and alumni are currently repaving the parking lot and re-carpeting the library.

STUDENTS...

- outscored their private and public school counterparts on the College Board SAT® by more than 100 points again this year and every year since 2008.
- enrolled increasing the student population by 5% over last year, after years of private school declining enrollment in Orange County.
- earned a spot in the CIF Football Playoffs for the third year in a row, advancing to the quarter finals, along the way breaking important school, CIF and county records.

STAFF...

- director of Instrumental Music, Len Montgomery, was named one of “The 25 Best Teachers in Orange County” by Parenting OC Magazine.
- Warrior Café won the “Outstanding Retail Services Award” presented by the Orange County Department of Health.
- The school recently benefitted greatly from its merger with the “BCHS Foundation.” The unanimously approved merger helped the school to its strongest financial position in over a decade.
- And last but not least, the school was named one of the “50 best Christian High Schools in America” by the BestSchools.org, citing excellent academics, richness of the extra-curricular program and “taking their faith seriously.”

We are thankful to our God and Savior Jesus Christ for protecting this ministry for nearly seven decades. He has used alumni, parents and generous friends in each era to provide for His school. If the Lord tarries, may the generations that follow find us faithful!

Rick Niswonger, Principal

To be admitted to BCHS, the student and at least one parent must be born-again Christians who regularly attend church. The student must have scored in the 60th percentile or above in Total Reading and Total Mathematics sections on the most recent achievement testing. Scores below the 60th percentile may require further testing.

Admission to advanced courses requires placement testing.

Brethren Christian welcomes all applicants, regardless of race, color, national origin, ancestry, or sex, who have a personal commitment to faith in Christ and desire a high-quality Christian education. Applicants must be prepared spiritually, academically, socially, physically and linguistically to meet the requirements of Brethren Christian’s well-defined, college preparatory, English medium, mainstream, Christian, educational program.
RYAN PIANTEDOSI
Brethren Christian senior accepted to Pomona Pitzer on a football scholarship. This requires a student with exemplary football skills and a 4.0 GPA.

Four years ago, BCHS football player Ryan Randle was accepted into Pitzer. Randle is now at UCLA Medical School on a full-academic scholarship.

In the world of high school athletics there are few areas that garner more recognition than Orange County, Calif.

C.I.F. and state—and often national—championships have become a matter of course in the county, especially for large private schools.

Small schools like Brethren Christian also strive for excellence, and produce not only exemplary students, but also competitive athletes and most important, all-star citizens.

Brethren Christian can point to the successes of its recent graduate Ryan Randle ('09) and current senior Ryan Piantedosi ('15) who are to be included in this group.

Ryan Randle graduated from Brethren in 2009, after four stellar years in the classroom and on the gridiron. “At the time,” recalls current head coach, Harvard All-American and all-pro NFL veteran, Pat McInally, “I was in my last year as an assistant coach. Ryan was an outstanding Christian man and I felt that he had the academic wherewithal, as well as the athletic ability, to play in college. I helped get him into Pomona College (an institution consistently ranked in Forbes’ top 10) and was thrilled to do so. He played all four years at Pomona-Pitzer, started a Christian organization on campus, and earned excellent grades.”

Randle’s efforts paid off when he was awarded a full scholarship to the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA. His story, while exemplary, is only the beginning of what head coach McInally sees as a coming trend for Brethren athletes.

“Ryan was the first football player from Brethren to advance to the next level in many years,” says McInally. “But there will be more to come. For parents who want a school dedicated to Christian values, where their son has an opportunity to serve the Lord, be challenged by rigorous academics, and play on a team coached by some of the finest coaches in the area, I feel that we are second to none.”

Ryan Piantedosi, who will graduate this spring, is a testament to coach McInally’s statement. Piantedosi, who did not play as a freshman and was a JV player as a sophomore, was thrust into a varsity role as a junior. “We did not have a man who could play center,” recalled McInally, “so Ryan stepped in. He received excellent coaching from our offensive line coach, Jesse Sapolu (a former NFL All-Pro and four time Super Bowl champion) and took to it well.

By the time he was a senior he was a team captain. He’s an amazing story.”

Like Ryan Randle before him, Piantedosi is headed for Pomona College where, according to coach McInally, he will play football and continue to pursue academic excellence.

Now in his fifth year as head coach, McInally enjoys strong support from principal Rick Niswonger, and the entire faculty and student body. McInally is quick to point out: “We’ve got great parents that seek an opportunity for their kids to excel in a Christian atmosphere.

“Both Ryan Randle and Ryan Piantedosi are wonderful examples of winning in service to their Savior, in the classroom, and on the fields of play. For both of these fine men, and for those who are to follow, the future is bright.”
In the fall of 1964, when Brethren Junior & Senior High Schools were domiciled across the street from a fly-swept dairy in Paramount, Calif., a young teacher named Jim Lanning arrived on campus to serve as the supervisor of the Junior High School. In the course of the next half-century this small town son of a railroad brakeman and dry cleaner presser would serve God as a teacher, administrator, coach, counselor, puppeteer and steadfast Christian Warrior.

“I grew up in Tracy, California,” Jim recalled. “Both of my parents worked and when I was a teenager I got a job at the local recreation department. I did a little of everything from lining the softball fields to coaching the teams. I loved working with the kids and when I went off to college at Bob Jones University, my intention was to become a youth pastor. But it didn’t work out that way. I met my wife Phyllis at school and the Lord led me to teaching.”

After graduation, Jim and Phyllis served two years teaching at Wichita Christian School in Wichita, Kansas and another year at Pomona Valley Christian School. “When Pomona Valley closed,” Jim went on, “I was looking for a job and heard about an opening at a school called Brethren in Paramount so I applied and got the job. I recall asking myself if we were destined to keep moving around the country. But after fifty-one years, I’ve concluded that the answer is a resounding no!”

Jim’s service ran the gamut from the principal’s office to the classroom to the athletic field. “My first assignment was in administration at the Jr. High School,” he said. “But the high school needed a varsity basketball coach so I did that as well.”

It was the start of a long career in which Jim wore many hats. Over the decades he served as principal at both at the elementary and high school level, coached football, basketball and baseball and taught science and Bible.

“I was very lucky in those early years,” he said. “I was young and inexperienced, but was surrounded by a group of seasoned and very solid professional educators. Ruth Ender, Carleda Hutton, Jim Crawford, Dortha (“Harmy”) Harmonson, Joe Smith, Al Flory and so many more mentored me. They were all called to Christian education and really took me under their wing. I learned from them to always treat people with respect and to focus on loving the Lord and the kids.”

In 1991, Jim was called to a ministry that he still engages in today. “I was teaching wood shop at the old Cypress campus,” he said, “and was also traveling around to our feeder schools talking to younger students. I’d give a chapel talk and do a little magic for the kids and then talk about the benefits of attending Brethren.

“Anyway,” he continued, “I was walking on campus and one of our teachers, Ray Thomas, asked me if I could make a puppet stage for some students. Usually a puppet stage is made from cardboard, but I didn’t know that so I built a wooden one. It was quite a project, and since I spent so much time making it I decided to watch the kids when they preformed their show. It was fascinating and I figured that my chapel kids would love it. The two student puppeteers agreed to help me with my shows. After a few appearances, they added a third puppeteer and I needed another puppet, but had no place to buy one. After driving around town for a day I finally found a shop that sold me three puppets for $75.00 in exchange for teaching puppeteering.”

From that simple transaction a ministry was born. Jim’s program has continued for more than 24 years. This year alone more than 40 young puppeteers ply their ancient art to a wide-ranging community of prospective students. Between his puppet program and his youth outreach at Rawhide Ranch near Bonsall, California, Jim’s ministry has reached thousands of young people with the simple and loving message of salvation through Christ.

For more than five decades, Jim Lanning has been a constant presence on and off campus and has witnessed the myriad societal changes that effect our young. When asked to compare the “then and now,” his answer reflects a half-century of dedication to his students and his school.

“It’s a different culture today,” he says. “There are so many ways that kids can be attacked spiritually. The effect of the entertainment industry on kids today is profound—it’s just very tough on them. And parents are different as well—in some respects they are a little soft. I firmly believe that it’s imperative that we keep a high set of expectations for our kids so that they will be confident and strong in their lives and in the faith.”

“In that regard, I’ve stayed at Brethren because our philosophy has never wavered and our school has never waivered. We’ve had, and continue to have, so many wonderful people here. As my career has entered its second fifty years I’m not on campus as much as I’d like but I love being with the kids.

“Brethren is my home.”

Meet Abby McInally
For her, it’s all about the Kids

Senior Abby McInally started her puppeteering career as a sophomore. “My brother had been a part of Mr. Lanning’s (puppeteering) program,” she recalled, “and told me about it. I thought it looked like fun and have been doing it ever since.”

In the course of her three years in the program, Abby estimates that she and her fellow trouper have done more than fifty puppet shows, almost all in Christian schools. “We’ve done shows for kids from Pre-K to eighth grade,” she says, “and it’s really been fun.”

As she prepares to leave Brethren for California Baptist University in Riverside, Abby—who is also the varsity girls volleyball captain—was asked what she will miss the most about her experience as a puppeteer: “I’ll miss my friends, of course,” she reflected. “But I’ll really miss the kids. They’re so cute. To them the puppet characters are real, they high-five them, talk to them and are simply entranced by them. It’s been such a blessing to share the stories of the Bible with them. Mr. Lanning has been wonderful and so have all of my friends. But for me, it’s all about the kids, and it’s them that I’ll miss the most.”

Flipped math: The higher-level math courses at Brethren Christian High School have a new Video Lecture Format (“flipped classroom”). The video lecture is viewed by students at home, with a few practice problems assigned. Students work through the concepts during the next class period.

The results? The average test scores improved, which is significant being that the Calculus Advanced Placement Test scores were already averaging 4.0 for the past 10 years.
